

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Media Contact:

Amy Kapp, Public Relations Coordinator
YouthBuild Philadelphia Charter School
(215) 627-8671x39 (work) or (215) 284-1648 (cell)
akapp@youthbuildphilly.org

Day of Event Contact:

Lark Rambo, AmeriCorps Coordinator
YouthBuild Philadelphia Charter School
(267) 549-3536 (cell)

Students from Philadelphia to Join Hundreds of Low-Income Youth in Nation's Capitol
To Raise Their Voices and Offer Solutions to Ending Poverty in America

Philadelphia, March 28, 2008 – Thirty-three students from Philadelphia are joining nearly 500 low-income young leaders for the first-of-its-kind “Our America” youth town hall on April 1 in Washington, D.C. Representing the YouthBuild Philadelphia Charter School program, the young leaders are part of a national movement to ensure their voices are part of the national political debate on ending poverty in America and on related key issues affecting low-income young people, including public education, family, crime and the economy. At this event, youth also will present their “Declaration of Inter-dependence,” a youth-written document detailing comprehensive policy recommendations on key issues.

The “Our America” gathering is being sponsored by YouthBuild USA and Think.MTV.com and is supported by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. Hosted by MTV news correspondents Sway Calloway and Kim Stolz, the event will feature testimonies from young adult leaders, including YouthBuild Philadelphia Class of 2007 alumna Shardell Martin, about their lives growing up in low-income communities and a discussion about needed policy changes. Attendees will also hear from Poem-cees, a D.C. poetry and hip-hop performance group. More than 40 national organizations in 25 states are co-sponsoring the event.

“This is an extraordinary opportunity for our students to participate in an unprecedented national conversation among low-income young people,” said Brian Leffler, director of program development at YouthBuild Philadelphia. “The conversation is a step toward change, not only in their lives, but on a national level.”

Participants in “Our America” include young people who have dropped out of high school and experienced homelessness, teen pregnancy and incarceration, but are rising above such difficult challenges. On April 2, the day after the town hall gathering, young leaders from YouthBuild, including two YouthBuild Philadelphia student leaders, Carreather Atcherson and Tyrone Roberts, will spend the day meeting with members of Congress, talking about how YouthBuild helped them transform their lives and rebuild their communities.

“This is a unique gathering in which hundreds of low-income young people are sharing their experiences and solutions for ending poverty in America,” said Dorothy Stoneman, president and founder of YouthBuild USA, a national non-profit organization in which low-income youth work toward their GEDs or high school diplomas while rebuilding affordable housing for poor people. “Our goal is to mobilize a national community of low-income young people who will take action to transform America's most pressing problems.”

####

YouthBuild is a youth and community development program that addresses core issues facing low-income communities including: housing, education, employment, crime prevention, and leadership development. In YouthBuild programs, low-income young people ages 16-24 work toward their GED or high school diploma while learning job skills by building affordable housing for homeless and low-income people and participating in leadership development activities in their communities. For more information, visit www.youthbuild.org.

YouthBuild Philadelphia Charter School is a not-for-profit organization that provides out-of-school youth in Philadelphia the broadest range of tools, supports and opportunities available to become self-sufficient, responsible and productive citizens. YouthBuild Philadelphia offers an innovative program, which blends a rigorous academic curriculum with 900 hours of community service (per student) and on-the-job training in construction, technology or nursing.

Students at YouthBuild Philadelphia can earn their high school diplomas and make successful transitions to full-time jobs and post-secondary educational programs. For more information, visit www.youthbuildphilly.org.

Think.MTV.com is an online community where the biggest names in pop culture, as well as top non-profits and civic organizations, can join forces with young people to address pressing social issues. For more information, visit www.think.mtv.com.

Co-sponsoring organizations for the “Our America” town hall include:

Afterschool Alliance	Learning Work Connection
Alternatives Schools Network	MENTOR/National Mentoring Partnership
America Forward	National Association of Street Schools
America's Promise	National Collaborative for Youth
Association for Career and Technical Education	National Youth Employment Coalition
American Youth Policy Forum	Organized Youth for Educational Alternatives
Campaign for Youth	Public Allies
Chi Upsilon Sigma National Latin Sorority	Rebuilding Together
Citizens Schools	Risk Metrics Group
City Year	Sar Levitan Center, JHU
Coalition on Human Needs	Share Our Strengths
Communities in Schools	The Big Picture Company
Community Action Partnership	The Center for Community Change
Diploma Plus	The Corps Network
First Focus	The Young Peoples Project
Forum for Youth Investment	Wave Inc.
Gay, Lesbian & Straight Education Network	Year UP
I Have a Dream Foundation	Youth Advocate Program
Jobs for America's Graduates	Youth Service America
Jobs for the Future	